SYNOPSIS

“Moksha’s Law”; expands recovery of damages in civil action arising from death of certain animals.

CURRENT VERSION OF TEXT

As introduced.

(Sponsorship Updated As Of: 10/8/2026)

1 AN ACT concerning civil actions for damages for the death of
2 certain animals and designated Moksha's Law, supplementing
3 Title 2A of the New Jersey Statutes, and repealing R.S.4:19-8.
4

5 BE IT ENACTED by the Senate and General Assembly of the State
6 of New Jersey:
7

8 1. The Legislature finds and declares that:

9 a. Pets and service animals are valuable and treasured members
10 of many New Jersey families.

11 b. Under current law, when negligence, recklessness, or 12 intentional misconduct leads to the death of a pet or service animal,
13 families are extremely limited in what damages they may receive
14 from wrongdoers through a civil action.

15 c. These limited damages do not adequately compensate families
16 for the loss of their pet or service animal.

17 d. In McDougall v. Lamm, 211 N.J. 203 (2012), the New Jersey
18 Supreme Court exacerbated this issue by holding that a pet owner
19 may not recover for the emotional distress caused by the traumatic
20 death of their pet.

21 e. The purpose of "Moksha's Law" is to fill this gap, supersede
22 McDougall, and provide structured, fair compensation to New
23 Jersey families when negligence, recklessness, or intentional
24 misconduct leads to the death of their pet or service animal.
25

26 2. a. Definitions.

27 As used in this section:

28 "Domestic companion animal" means an animal commonly
29 referred to as a pet that was bought, bred, raised, or otherwise
30 acquired, in accordance with local ordinances and State and federal 31 law, for the primary purpose of providing companionship to the 32 owner, rather than for business or agricultural purposes.

33 "Emotional support animal" means an animal that provides 34 emotional, cognitive, or other similar support to an individual with 35 a disability and that does not need to be trained or certified.

36 "Service animal" has the same meaning as set forth in the federal 37 "Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990," 42 U.S.C. s.12101 et 38 seq., and any regulations under the act.

39 b. Cause of action. A person who has a right of ownership in a
40 domestic companion animal, emotional support animal, or a service
41 animal that dies due to the intentional, reckless, or negligent actions
42 of another person may bring a civil action to recover compensatory
43 and noneconomic damages sustained by that person. A civil action
44 may be brought under this section only if the domestic companion
45 animal, emotional support animal, or service animal had been
46 normally maintained in or near the household of the owner.

47 c. Damages.

1 (1) Compensatory damages awarded pursuant to this section
2 include, but shall not be limited to, veterinary expenses, burial
3 expenses, and the fair market value of the domestic companion
4 animal, emotional support animal, or service animal.
5 Compensatory damages in an action involving a service animal
6 may, in addition to any other compensatory damages, include the
7 cost of the service animal and any specialized training the service
8 animal received.

9 (2) Noneconomic damages awarded pursuant to this section
10 shall be limited to compensation for the loss of companionship,
11 love, and affection of the domestic companion animal, emotional
12 support animal, or service animal.

13 (3) A court shall award reasonable attorney's fees and other
14 litigation costs reasonably incurred.

15 (4) If the domestic companion animal, emotional support
16 animal, or service animal died due to the intentional actions of 17 another person or by a dog previously declared by a municipal court
18 to be vicious or potentially dangerous pursuant to P.L.1989, c.307
19 (C.4:19-17 et seq.), a court may award punitive damages in an
20 action brought pursuant to this section.

21 d. Exclusions. This section shall not apply to:

22 (1) an action for professional negligence against a veterinarian
23 licensed pursuant to Title 45 of the Revised Statutes while 24 following accepted standards of practice of the profession, unless
25 the action is over an act of gross negligence or willful or wanton
26 misconduct;

27 (2) an action for negligence against the State or a political
28 subdivision of the State or an employee, officer, or agent thereof
29 while acting within the scope of the employee's, officer's, or 30 agent's employment or official duties;

31 (3) an action for negligence against an employee of or volunteer
32 for a county society for the prevention of cruelty to animals or a
33 non-profit corporation that is organized to promote the interests of,
34 and protect and care for, animals, while acting within the scope of 35 the employee's or volunteer's employment or duties; or

36 (4) an action over the killing of a domestic companion animal,
37 emotional support animal, or a service animal that was chasing,
38 worrying, wounding or destroying livestock at the time of the
39 domestic companion animal, emotional support animal, or service
40 animal's death pursuant to R.S.4:19-9.

41 e. Availability of other remedies. The remedies provided in this 42 section are in addition to any other remedies allowed by law.

43

44 3. Section 4:19-8 of the Revised Statutes is repealed.

45

46 4. This act shall take effect immediately and shall apply to all
47 causes of action arising prior to, on, or after the effective date for 48 which the applicable statute of limitations has not expired.

STATEMENT

This bill expands the recovery of damages in a civil action arising from the death of certain animals.

Under the bill, a person who has a right of ownership in a domestic companion animal, emotional support animal, or a service animal that dies due to the intentional, reckless, or negligent actions of another person may bring a civil action to recover compensatory and noneconomic damages sustained by that person. The domestic companion animal, emotional support animal, or service animal must have been normally maintained in or near the household of the owner.

A court may award compensatory damages including, but not limited to: (1) veterinary expenses; (2) burial expenses; and (3) the fair market value of the domestic companion animal, emotional support animal, or service animal. A court may also award noneconomic damages for the loss of companionship, love, and affection of the domestic companion animal, emotional support animal, or service animal. In addition to compensatory and noneconomic damages, a court must award reasonable attorney's fees and other litigation costs reasonably incurred. If the animal was killed by a dog previously declared to be vicious or potentially dangerous or due to the intentional actions of another, a court could also award punitive damages.

Certain actions are excluded under the bill:

- Actions for professional negligence against a veterinarian licensed and following accepted standards of practice of the profession unless the action is over an act of gross negligence or willful or wanton misconduct;
- Actions for negligence against the State or a political subdivision of the State or an employee, officer, or agent thereof while acting within the scope of the employee's, officer's, or agent's employment or official duties;
- Actions for negligence against an employee of or volunteer for a county society for the prevention of cruelty to animals or a non-profit corporation that is organized to promote the interests of, and protect and care for, animals, while acting within the scope of the employee's or volunteer's employment or duties; and
- Actions over the killing of a domestic companion animal, emotional support animal, or a service animal that was chasing, worrying, wounding or destroying livestock at the time of the domestic companion animal, emotional support animal, or service animal's death.

The remedies provided under the bill are in addition to any other remedies allowed by law. The bill would take effect immediately and apply to all causes of action arising prior to, on, or after the effective date for which the applicable statute of limitations has not

1 expired. The bill would supersede the ruling of the New Jersey
2 Supreme Court in McDougall v. Lamm, 211 N.J. 203 (2012).

3 The bill is designated “Moksha’s Law” in recognition of
4 Moksha, a Chihuahua mauled to death by a negligently supervised
5 pit bull. Due to the limited damages available for the wrongful
6 death of a domestic companion animal under current law, Moksha’s
7 family was unable to hold the owners of the pit bull accountable for 8 Moksha’s death.
